President's Perspective

Tony Kiser

Greetings HVAC community!

Just in case you have not been outside recently... summer is here! The south Florida hot and humid mornings followed by afternoon thunderstorms will be in all our lives in the immediate future. With this in mind, we must also consider another layer of safety—heat safety. Especially in this climate, heat safety is of the utmost importance. The heat index can rise rapidly in a short amount of time and lead to heat cramps, heat exhaustion, or even heat stroke. If you're new to our brutal summers or a born-and-raised Floridian, be sure to review these tips to beat the summer heat.

• Keep hydrated. Hydration starts the night before and counts throughout the day. Be sure you are drinking water all day, don't wait until you feel thirsty. Avoid energy drinks as they dehydrate you; replace with water or electrolyte-replacing beverages instead. Keep a cooler in your truck and ice it down every morning for cool drinks during the day.

• Protect your body. Use (and reapply!) sunscreen on exposed skin. Lightweight long sleeves, which allow evaporation, and a hat are helpful to keep the sun off of you. Protect your eyes with sunglasses. A nice treat is to keep a small cooling towel or bandana iced down in your cooler for a welcome break.

• Know the signs. Being hot and sweaty is a daily part of our job in the air conditioning world. It's important to recognize the signs of serious heat syndromes, including heat cramps, heat exhaustion, and heat stroke. Tap here to learn more.

One place we will be staying cool together is our 30th Annual High-E-Fishin-Sea Fishing Tournament on Saturday, June 11 at the Rafiki Tiki in the Riviera Beach Marina. The Captain's Meeting will be held on Thursday, June 9 at 6pm. Time is running out to register a boat so get your paperwork submitted to Pam ASAP.

I look forward to seeing everyone at the weigh station with their record-breaking fish!

Tony

TECHNICIAN'S CORNER

COMPRESSOR FAILURE

By Kelly McCann

We all know that the compressor is the heart of the system. It's the pump that creates the pressure differential to move the refrigerant through the system. These durable components come in different varieties; in today's topic I'd like to discuss the hermetically sealed version. We see many of these compressors in the HVAC systems here in Palm Beach County.

While not always the case, we as installers and technicians can be responsible for premature compressor failures, if we are not careful. Taking shortcuts like not purging with nitrogen while brazing or not doing a proper evacuation of the refrigerant system or a poorly designed duct system can all lead to failure. When I hear the compressor failed, I always think, "Who killed JR?" (Sorry dad joke). "What killed the compressor?" Let's look at some common causes that can lead to compressor failure:

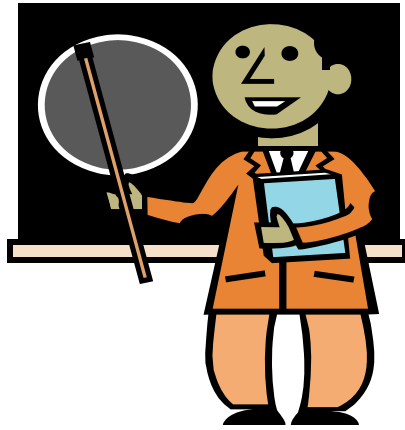

1. Voltage (variations, low, high, loose connections)
2. Refrigerant level (low pressure or flood back)
3. Low Airflow (duct, blower, blocked filters or coils)
4. Contaminates (acid, moisture, debris...I found a broken knife blade in a suction line once!)
5. Defective TXV
6. Condenser application (recirculating discharge air, inside a building without correct ventilation)

Some causes of compressor burnout are insufficient cooling from the suction line or compressor operation outside of its intended application. Since the returning suction vapor provides cooling for the compressor motor, when there is not enough of it coming back the motor can overheat. Common causes of high condensing pressure are dirty condensing coils, fan motor failure/low airflow, or recirculation of the condenser discharge air. Moisture in a system will lead to a failure, today's POE oils are hygroscopic so we must be careful. All of these should be checked during the startup process or during the PM visit.

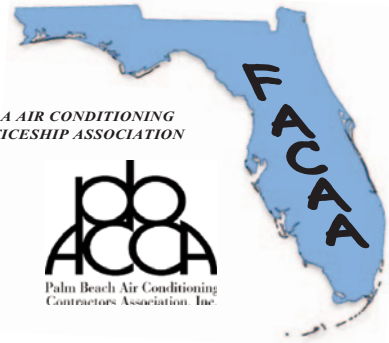

Finding the cause of a compressor failure is just as important as changing the compressor. Many times we cannot determine the root cause of the failure when the compressor is inoperable; with the system nonfunctional we can't check all the items needed to properly diagnose. This has to happen after the compressor is changed, once the root cause is found then additional items may need repair. Either way the cause of the compressor failure must be addressed so the new compressor lives on! If it's a burnout then a proper clean up needs to take place. Change the liquid drier, and add a suction drier. Note: The suction drier is not an "install-and-forget it" part. When the drier captures contaminants in the system it will restrict the flow of refrigerant causing a pressure drop. Once a pressure drop occurs, the suction drier will need to be replaced; depending on the circumstances the drier may need to be changed a few times before it's clean. This will need to be continued until the restriction and resulting pressure drop stops.

Another item to consider when a burnout occurs is changing the accumulator, if one is installed. Changing the accumulator eliminates the potential for contaminants to be reintroduced into the clean system.

I know this has been a "high level" view of this topic, there is a lot more information to discuss. Hopefully it's piqued an interest for you to research further. In summary, once the compressor is changed, a thorough tech will investigate the cause for the failure. Make sure you are looking for the root cause of the compressor failure. Checking the items (1-6) listed above will generally put you in the ballpark for the rest of the solution. Remember, the worst thing we can do is change the compressor and walk away without knowing "who killed JR." ☺

Another Reason to Smile

BLONDE JOKE THAT YOU'VE NEVER HEARD BEFORE

After becoming very frustrated with the attitude of one of the shopkeepers, the young blonde declared, 'Well, then, maybe I'll just go out and catch my own alligator and get a pair of alligator shoes for free!'

The shopkeeper replied with a sly smile, 'Well, little lady, why don't you go give it a try?'

The blonde headed off to the swamp, determined to catch an alligator. Later in the day, the shopkeeper was driving home and spotted the young woman standing waist-deep in the murky water, shotgun in hand.

He saw a huge 9-foot gator swimming rapidly toward her. With lightning reflexes, the blond took aim, shot the creature and hauled it up onto the slippery bank.

Nearby were 7 more dead gators all lying belly up. The shopkeeper watched in amazement as the blond struggled with the gator. Then, rolling her eyes, she screamed in frustration.....

"CRAP!! THIS ONE'S BAREFOOT TOO!!!"
